

The US has fallen from 3rd to 15th in the world in broadband Internet access. It's time to stop the freefall.

The pioneers of the commercial Internet believe the time to act is now.

On May 6th, the Federal Communications Commission announced a common-sense "third way" framework for extending high-speed Internet access to all Americans and protecting broadband consumers' choice over what services and content to use. It is a narrowly tailored solution that defines a sensible middle-ground between neglect and old-fashioned regulation.

The companies of the Open Internet Coalition support action at the FCC as the best way to promote investment and innovation, and to ensure that consumers have fast and affordable access to the Internet.

The Open Internet Coalition represents consumers, grassroots organizations, and businesses working in pursuit of a shared goal: keeping the Internet fast, open and accessible to all Americans.

For more information, visit www.openinternetcoalition.com